

ABSTRACT

A device operative in a digital communication system and adapted to receive digital signals and transmit them along a transmission path, characterized in that this device is capable of preventing the transmission of a message comprising a pre-defined sequence of signals that is indicative of a malfunction occurred at the transmission path.